

Qualitative Health Research Collaborative (QUEST)

What is QUEST?

- QUEST is a group of researchers who share an interest in advancing qualitative health research and improving healthcare in our community.
- The group meets four times a year via Zoom to discuss topics in qualitative health research (e.g. ethics, funding, collaboration opportunities), methodological approaches to qualitative research, and other emerging qualitative research topics.
- It is a forum to share expertise across disciplines, sectors, and qualitative traditions.
- This year we hosted two renowned qualitative researchers: Dr. Sally Thorne and Dr. Victoria Clarke.
- Anyone interested in qualitative health research is welcome to attend.

What are we doing?

- QUEST supports the scholastic and professional growth of undergraduate students, graduate students, post-doctoral fellows, and early career researchers.
- The group promotes opportunities for networking and interdisciplinary work.
- The membership often shares resources (publications, transcription services).
- All sessions are recorded and made available on our website (unb.ca/saintjohn/sase/research/quest/), free of charge.

How will this help?

- QUEST aims to build qualitative health research capacity in New Brunswick. Over the past year, our scope has broadened to include participation across Canada, building capacity across the country.
