Territorial Acknowledgement / Reconnaissance territoriale

L₂RIC acknowledges that the land on which we gather is the traditional unceded territory of Wolastoqiyik. This territory is covered by the Treaties of Peace and Friendship which the Wolastoqiyik, Mi'kmaq, and Passamaquoddy peoples first signed with the British Crown in 1726. The treaties did not deal with surrender of lands and resources but in fact recognized Wolastoqey, Mi'kmaq, and Passamaquoddy title and established the rules for what was to be an ongoing relationship between nations.

L'IRL₂C tient à souligner que les terres sur lesquelles nous sommes rassemblés font partie du territoire traditionnel non cédé des Wolastoqiyik. Ce territoire est visé par les « traités de paix et d'amitié » que les Wolastoqiyik et les Micmacs ont d'abord conclus avec la Couronne britannique en 1726. Les traités en question ne comportaient pas de clause relative à la cession des terres et des ressources, mais reconnaissaient de fait le titre des Micmacs et des Wolastoqiyik et définissaient les règles quant à ce qui devait être des relations durables entre les nations.

L'enseignement et l'apprentissage des langues basés sur des tâches orales auprès d'élèves du primaire en immersion française

À la suite de leur étude sur les centres de littératie en immersion française, les profs. Josée Le Bouthillier et Renée Bourgoin ont analysé les données recueillies lors de cette étude exploratoire sous l'angle de l'enseignement et l'apprentissage des langues basés sur des tâches orales. Cette approche préconise l'utilisation d'une langue authentique afin de réaliser des tâches significatives dans la langue française. Cela leur a permis d'analyser les données recueillies en tenant compte des principes essentiels à la création de tâches porteuses d'apprentissages, du type de tâches et de leur évaluation. La prof. Le Bouthillier et sa collègue, la prof. Bourgoin, se sont concentrées sur la dissémination des connaissances en publiant les résultats de leurs analyses dans des revues universitaires, la dissémination des connaissances dans des contextes professionnels ayant déjà eu lieu précédemment.

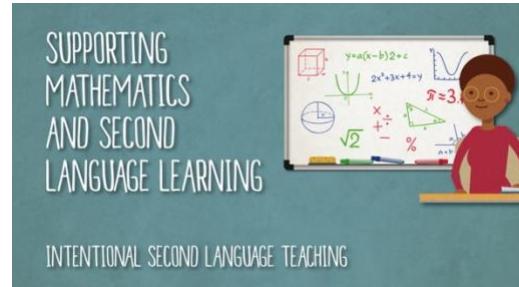

Pedagogical Video Series: Intentional Second Language Teaching

www.unb.ca/second-language/resources/video-series.html

This initiative began as a Master of Education special course and a partnership with the New Brunswick Department of Education and Early Childhood Development (EECD) and has since become a focal project for L₂RIC. To date, six pedagogical videos, and accompanying conversation guides, have been created in both French and English. Via the UNB YouTube Channel, these are available for free streaming on the L₂RIC website. These multimedia resources have been used in undergraduate and graduate courses as well as professional learning sessions and academic conference presentations.

Video 6: Supporting Mathematics and Second Language Learning / Soutenir l'apprentissage des mathématiques et des langues secondes

This newest video in our series explores the relationship between language and mathematics, and ways to support learners when they are learning mathematics content in a second language. Research has suggested that language is an integral part of "doing" mathematics (e.g., Halliday, 1978; Pimm, 1987) and this includes school mathematics. Mathematics and language work together in complex ways that serve to deepen learners' understanding of both.

Identity-Focused Research

One of the areas of focus for many of the members of the research team at L₂RIC is related to the topic of identity. Data gathered from the pan-Canadian research project on FSL teacher recruitment and retention revealed elements of identity development. As beginning FSL teachers embark on their careers, they are faced with perceptions and assumptions related to language and pedagogy that are personal, professional and societal in nature. Looking at these data through an identity lens, Dr. Karla Culligan and Dr. Paula Kristmanson presented a paper at the Psychology of Language Learning Conference (PLL4) at the University of Cape Breton in Sydney, Nova Scotia in June 2022.

Additionally, members of the L₂RIC team have taken a close look at the data collected from UNB teacher candidates participating in L₂RIC's "séances franco." These sessions were focused on building linguistic competence and confidence for students in the B.Ed program. We conducted a study related to the "séances" and posed research questions related to linguistic and pedagogical development. From these data the theme of identity emerged strongly and Dr. Josée Le Bouthillier and Dr. Paula Kristmanson presented these data at PLL4 and also published an article on this topic in the Journal of Belonging, Identity, Language, and Diversity.

Abstract

This article focuses on a qualitative case study of linguistic support sessions for French second language teacher candidates at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton, Canada. The overall purpose of the study was to explore the impact of these sessions on the participants' linguistic competence and confidence. In particular, this article examines one such impact: the construction of a linguistic and professional identity. Through the analysis of focus group transcriptions, findings related to the concept of identity are shared in order to shed light on the potential of these sessions beyond simply language improvement. The article concludes with a discussion of the possible implications of this study for FSL teacher recruitment and retention.

Finally, Dr. Josée Le Bouthillier and Dr. Melissa Dockrill Garrett are currently beginning to examine language teacher identity through a strengths-based lens. Their work aims to explore how teacher candidates come to understand the role of "critical incidents" during the initial teacher education program and how leveraging their strengths can serve to nurture and support the professional identity building process.

Séances franco et projet de recherche « Explorer la confiance et la compétence linguistiques des enseignants en formation initiale » : Projet complémentaire

Grâce à des fonds supplémentaires de Patrimoine canadien, l'équipe de l'IRL₂C a décidé de bonifier son offre de séances d'appoint linguistique pour soutenir ses étudiant.es sur les plans de la confiance et de la compétence linguistiques et d'étudier les effets de ces séances. Étant donné la pénurie d'enseignant.es en français langue seconde et des problèmes de rétention de ces enseignant.es, l'équipe de l'IRL₂C avait commencé à offrir des séances d'appoint linguistique informelles intitulées L'actualité au dîner. Ces séances informelles étant populaires et perçues comme étant avantageuses pour favoriser la confiance et la compétence linguistiques des étudiant.es en éducation en formation initiale, l'équipe de l'IRL₂C a désiré améliorer ces séances et étudier formellement leurs effets auprès des étudiant.es y participant.

Lisa Michaud anime une séance de formation linguistique.

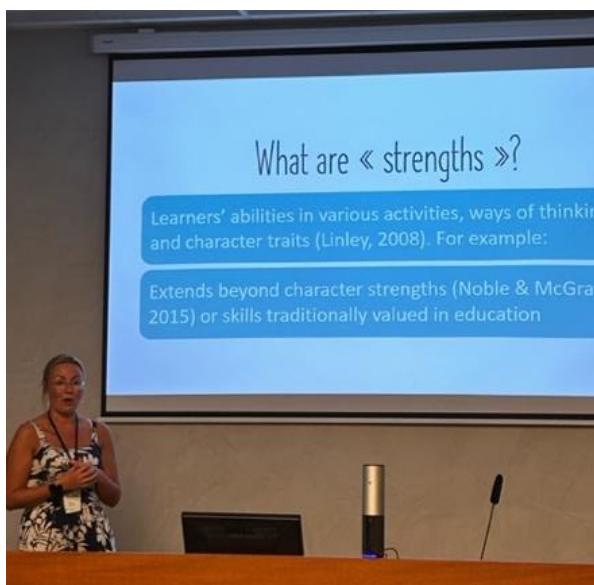

Sous la direction de la chercheuse principale, la prof. Josée Le Bouthillier, Lisa Michaud, Coordinatrice des séances franco, a offert une formation linguistique d'une semaine précédant le début officiel du programme intensif de formation initiale des enseignant.es de l'UNB ainsi que des séances offertes de façon hebdomadaire lors des trois trimestres universitaires. Selon le niveau de compétence langagière et la disponibilité des étudiant.es désirant participer aux séances, trois séances distinctes ont eu lieu chaque semaine afin de maximiser les occasions d'interactions dans la langue seconde, de personnaliser les discussions et d'offrir une rétroaction corrective constructive continue. Lisa Michaud a accordé beaucoup d'importance à la création d'une communauté d'apprenants où les futur.es enseignant.es du français langue seconde se sentaient en sécurité et épaulés. Des données ont été recueillies par le biais d'un questionnaire pré et post-séances, de groupes de discussion au début, au milieu et à la fin des séances, ainsi que d'entrevues orales (New Brunswick Oral Proficiency Interview) au début, au milieu et à la fin des séances pour mesurer les progrès sur les plans de la confiance et de la compétence linguistiques. L'analyse préliminaire des données a fait ressortir de nombreux avantages et gains tant en confiance et en compétence linguistiques.

Exploring the Impacts of Applying Strength-Based Perspectives and Practices to Student Learning and Engagement in the Elementary French Immersion Context

Inclusionary practice in New Brunswick exists within a support-oriented, and arguably deficit-based, dimension to student learning. Support service and delivery teams are necessary in ensuring access and support for all students within an inclusive education system. Often, students displaying academic or behavioural concerns within French immersion classrooms do not have access to the same level of supports and are encouraged to transition back into English classrooms. This can lead to students feeling unaccepted and inferior to their peers. Strength-based approaches, on the other hand, focus on educators developing relationships with their students. Recent perspectives highlight the need for the identification and mobilization of student strengths to be embedded into the classroom culture and planning initiatives of educators.

This study investigating the impacts of intentional identification, integration, and application of strength-based perspectives and practices on student learning, engagement, and second language acquisition within the elementary French immersion classroom setting was conducted in two phases. Using an appreciative inquiry research design, Dr. Melissa Dockrill Garrett conducted individual interviews with six teacher-participants to uncover current practices being used to support both second language acquisition and diverse learner needs in elementary French immersion classrooms. Interviews also provided insights into some of the challenges within the support and delivery of French immersion programs in New Brunswick. Findings from the first phase of this study served as the foundation for the second phase, which allowed teachers to participate in a professional learning session to learn more about strength-based practices. Site visits were conducted in each of the six classrooms to observe these newly developed practices in action. While data collection has been completed, Dr. Dockrill Garrett continues to analyze the data from this study from different perspectives, disseminating the results within academic and professional communities.

FSL Teacher Education Project: Supported by the Canadian Association of Second Language Teachers (CASLT)

In 2020 L₂RIC embarked on a collaborative project with the University of Ottawa and the University of British Columbia. All members of the L₂RIC team were involved in this two-year multifaceted project, which finished up in the spring of 2023. Entitled, Identifying Requirements and Gaps in French as a Second Language (FSL) Teacher Education: Recommendations and Guidelines, the findings of this research provided many implications for the recruitment and retention of FSL teachers.

Dr. Joseph Dicks, Dr. Karla Culligan, Dr. Josée Le Bouthillier, and Dr. Paula Kristmanson present findings from the FSL teacher education project with fellow team members at Languages Without Borders in March 2023.

Researcher Biographies

The FSL Teacher Education Consortium is comprised of CASLT (the sponsor organization) and teams of research experts from three Canadian Faculties of Education. Each university's team of researchers will focus on different provinces and territories, allowing for insights, findings, and recommendations unique to each.

During this time frame, members of L₂RIC were involved in ongoing knowledge dissemination related to the results of this pan-Canadian research, including several conference presentations and article publications.

CASLT was the sponsor organization of the research team comprising experts from three Canadian Faculties of Education:

- University of Ottawa (EducLang – Education and Languages Research Group)
- University of British Columbia (Department of Language and Literacy Education)
- University of New Brunswick (L₂RIC – Second Language Research Institute of Canada)

Under project leader Dr. Stephanie Arnott from the University of Ottawa, a report was published summarizing the study, its methodology, the findings, and next steps.

Findings were also organized in two key infographics: one describing the “Avalanche” facing FSL teachers and why some decide to leave the profession, and the other using a “Highway” metaphor to describe the recruitment and retention pathway as well as the opportunities and obstacles encountered along the way.

Two key infographics from the FSL Teacher Education Project, which can be downloaded from the CASLT website, www.caslt.org.

The team presented the final results of the study at several conferences including the American Association of Applied Linguistics (AAAL), the Canadian Association of Applied Linguistics (ACLA), and CASLT's Languages Without Borders (LWB).

L'acquisition du français dans les classes d'immersion précoce de la 1re à la 3e année

Comment soutenir l'acquisition de la langue orale auprès des élèves débutants : une séquence d'enseignement

Sans nier l'importance de l'apprentissage de la lecture et de l'écriture chez les jeunes élèves de l'élementaire débutant en immersion française (IF), mettre l'accent sur l'acquisition de la langue orale au tout début jette des bases solides qui favoriseront cet apprentissage (Quiring, 2019).

Il est primordial que les élèves en IF entendent, comprennent le français et interagissent à de multiples occasions dès leur entrée dans le programme.

Les tâches d'écoute, de production et d'interaction proposées par les enseignants doivent être significatives pour les élèves, c'est-à-dire liées à leur vécu et à leurs intérêts, pour les engager et les motiver à apprendre leur langue seconde (L2). Cette première année en IF où les élèves effectuent leurs premiers contacts avec la langue est déterminante pour insuffler le désir de poursuivre son apprentissage. Ainsi, les enseignants doivent avoir plusieurs fléches à leur arc, car il peut être complexe d'enseigner à des jeunes élèves qui n'ont aucune connaissance du français.

Étant donné l'importance de l'exposition à une langue compréhensible et significative en plus de la production et de l'interaction orales, notre article a pour but de présenter une séquence d'enseignement démontrant la façon de soutenir l'acquisition de la langue orale auprès d'élèves débutants dans le programme d'immersion. Cette séquence, où l'étayage est très présent, a été utilisée avec succès dans les classes de trois enseignantes-recherchères collaborant avec les professeures Josée Le Bouthillier et Renée Bourgoïn de l'Institut de recherche en langues secondes du Canada (IRLS-C).

Etape 1
Les tout-débutants en français langue seconde (FLS) traversent une période silencieuse. À clive vrai, les élèves ne sont pas silencieux, mais cette période dite silencieuse vise à souligner l'importance d'exposer les élèves à une langue riche, compréhensible et significative.

C'est l'exposition répétée à la langue qui permet aux élèves de jeter les premiers jalons d'une grammaire interne du français.

Exemple qui suit démontre la façon de progresser de l'écoute à la production orale en complémentant la langue progressivement et en ajoutant des éléments écrits.

ECHOS DU CONGRÈS

QUELQUES AMORCES...

Premièrement

Ensuite,

Finalement

Le matin, je...

Je mange mon déjeuner avec...

Je porte...

Je vais à l'école en...

Mme Turcotte a choisi un thème lié à la vie quotidienne des élèves – la routine du matin. Afin de personnaliser le thème, l'engager tous les sens de même que les élèves, elle a apporté la maison à l'école et a fait une simulation.

Mme Turcotte prétend être à la maison et elle s'accompagne d'actions et d'objets pour verbaliser sa routine du matin. Elle décrit ses actions, se répète et demande aux élèves de répéter après elle. Ensuite, elle commence à ajouter des éléments pour amener les élèves à combiner des images avec une phrase de base et un élément de la routine. Encore une fois, elle décrit les actions en construisant le mur de phrases avec les élèves et elle les fait répéter.

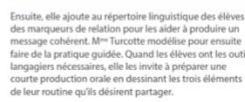

Mme Turcotte ne perd jamais de vue qu'elle désire élargir le répertoire langagier des élèves et les pousser à utiliser des structures de plus en plus complexes en construisant avec ceux-ci des supports pédagogiques additionnels.

Une fois que les élèves ont été immergés dans la langue maternelle, ils ont développé un niveau de compréhension des structures de phrases simples, il est important de continuer à élargir leur vocabulaire. L'utilisation de thèmes, une fois de plus sur des sujets familiers liés à la vie quotidienne des élèves, permet de développer la langue orale de façon significative et authentique.

En continuant à modéliser et à engager les élèves dans plusieurs tâches orales guidées, les enseignantes ont commencé à intégrer des centres de littératie de l'oral, développés en fonction des intérêts des élèves, de la langue et des tâches modélisées et pratiquées en groupe classe, pour leur permettre d'utiliser la langue de façon plus spontanée et autonome.

Ensuite, elle ajoute au répertoire linguistique des élèves des marqueurs de relation pour les aider à produire un message cohérent. Mme Turcotte modélise pour ensuite faire de la pratique guidée. Quand les élèves ont les outils langagiers nécessaires, elle les invite à préparer une courte production orale en dessinant les trois éléments de leur routine qu'ils désirent partager.

À la suite de leur étude sur l'acquisition du français dans les classes d'immersion précoce de la 1^{re} à la 3^e année visant à explorer comment se déroule l'acquisition orale du français avec le prof. Joseph Dicks, la prof. Josée Le Bouthillier a poursuivi sa collaboration avec la prof. Renée Bourgoïn de St. Thomas University. L'étude initiale ayant été interrompue par la pandémie, les profs. Le Bouthillier et Bourgoïn ont continué à recueillir des échantillons de la communication orale spontanée d'élèves en élargissant leur champ de recherche aux élèves dans les classes d'immersion précoce de la 1^{re} à la 12^e année. À partir de la transcription de ces enregistrements, les chercheurs ont examiné la production linguistique orale des élèves du point de vue de la précision et de la fluidité. Des analyses plus approfondies des données sont toujours en cours. Les profs Le Bouthillier et Bourgoïn combinent maintenant l'analyse et la théorisation dans le but de proposer des stades d'acquisition en s'inspirant de ceux de Krashen (1981) qui représentaient un contexte naturel d'acquisition de la langue, mais dans le contexte scolaire que sont les programmes d'immersion française.

Parallèlement aux analyses à des fins de recherche, les profs. Le Bouthillier et Bourgoïn ont aussi travaillé avec la prof. Melissa Dockrill Garrett et les enseignantes, Nikki Bélanger-Turcotte et Jennifer Rogers, afin de disséminer les connaissances liées au soutien de l'acquisition du français parlé auprès d'élèves débutants en immersion française. Cette collaboration s'est soldée par des présentations professionnelles auprès de professionnels de l'immersion partout au Canada et par la publication d'un article dans une revue professionnelle.

Untangling Threads of Care: Exploring Family Practices that Support Elementary French Immersion Students in Mathematics

Under the supervision of Drs. Karla Culligan and David Wagner, this study explores how parents and caregivers support elementary French immersion (FI) students as they learn mathematics at school. This doctoral work focuses on examining the tensions of learning mathematics in FI, where both the discipline (mathematics) and the program (immersion) have been associated with gatekeeping in public education (Mady & Masson, 2018; Wagner, 2021). There are pervasive narratives about which characteristics are a “good fit” for FI, and these exclusionary ideas often reflect a deficit orientation towards parents.

This study explores emerging counternarratives that foreground relationships between home and school and how they impact families' experiences of learning mathematics in FI. This approach resists a school-centred orientation to family involvement and instead explores the possibility of a family orientation to student learning. In this study, Julianne will explore the ways that parents and caregivers support children's mathematics learning and schooling by asking the following research questions: (a) How are caregivers of students in the FI program supporting their children's mathematics learning/schooling? (b) How do caregivers adopt the roles of learner, teacher, and leader to support their children in mathematics? (c) How does the relationship between home and school influence the roles that caregivers adopt and the ways that they support mathematics learning and schooling? Drawing from feminist care ethics (Langford, 2019) and storytelling (Dupuis et al., 2022), this qualitative study combines individual in-depth interviews with participant journaling to shine light on how caregivers support elementary FI students in their learning of mathematics.

Julianne has completed her final comprehensive exam and is preparing to defend her research proposal. Data collection is expected to begin in 2024.

Investigating Strength-Based Practices Within a Dual-Dimensional Model to Inclusionary Student Learning

This study investigated the current use of strength-based practices within the context of New Brunswick's inclusive model of education. Since its adoption in the 1980s, various structures have been put in place to meet the diverse needs of the learners throughout the province. The roles of resource teachers and other student service team members resulted from these efforts. Targeted interventions, triaged through models such as the pyramid of interventions, serve as tools to provide students with the necessary supports to experience academic success.

This focus on student "gaps" has created a deficit-based approach to student learning that does not factor in student competency based on their existing strengths, interests, or passions. There has been an identified need to move beyond this solely support-oriented approach to inclusionary education to encompass one that values individual strengths and abilities, promoting positive learning environments conducive to student flourishing. Through the theoretical lenses of self-determination theory (Deci & Ryan, 2000) and of positive psychology's PERMAH model (Seligman, 2011), as well as Keyes' (2002) dual-dimensional model of wellbeing, this research set out to explore the various strength-based facets currently being applied and integrated within schools and classrooms throughout New Brunswick.

Findings uncovered several areas of professional dissonance causing tension between professional practices and philosophical beliefs. While including various examples of strength-based practices currently being applied in pockets of inclusionary schools and classrooms, this study explored, to a deeper extent, the specific elements involved in establishing a comfortable process for change for student leaders, classroom educators, prominent stakeholders, and students. The process for change that resulted in the study's findings highlighted the importance of the role of visionaries in promoting a shared vision to begin this shift and adoption of the strength-based paradigm within an inclusionary school culture. Several components of a strength-based mindset as well as corresponding practices were identified as being essential for the promotion of student success, wellbeing, and overall flourishing within New Brunswick's inclusionary education system. Theoretical and practical implications for educators and policymakers are delineated upon in the final discussion based on the salient findings of the study. Suggestions for future research were also explored.

Amy Katharine Bartlett, PhD Candidate

Literacy Instruction in Nunavut

There is widespread agreement that literacy (reading and writing) instruction for Nunavut students is falling short. According to the National Committee on Inuit Education (2011), “the reality of Inuit education in Canada is that too many of our [Inuit] children are not attending school, too few are graduating, and even some of our graduates are not equipped with an education that fully meets the Canadian standard” (p. 3). Justice Berger (2006) found that while students could converse in English, “their English skills [were not] sufficiently advanced to facilitate instruction in English” (p. v) and that the school system was not producing graduates competent in either language (Inuktitut or English). In response, the Nunavut Department of Education announced a literacy initiative to address these issues. According to the press release the intention is to provide a consistent way to teach and assess literacy skills. The release called this approach “balanced literacy” and described it as “a balance of direct and indirect instruction” including “strategies that use levelled reading and writing and word study.” This approach was to be phased in over 3 years, beginning in January 2015, with full implementation in all grades in the 2016-2017 school year. Under the supervision of Dr. Paula Kristmanson, the focus of this research study will be to report the stories of the balanced literacy initiative for educators in Nunavut. What lessons can we learn from their stories about literacy instruction in a bilingual environment or about the implementation of educational initiatives in Nunavut? What are some commonalities in experiences across regions' roles? How are their experiences both shared and unique?

Katharine Bartlett is currently in the final writing phase of her PhD dissertation and is planning to defend in spring 2024.

Chris Van den Broeck, PhD

Exploring a Critical Model of English for Academic Purposes (EAP)

Under the supervision of Dr. Paula Kristmanson, this study explored the possibilities of adopting a critical approach to literacy in English for Academic Purposes (EAP) classrooms, through action research. The study explored the following research questions: The research questions were: How would a critical approach to EAP (English for Academic Purposes) better inform my own teaching practices, and approaches to language teaching pedagogy, and what would the implications of a critical approach to EAP be for the learners? With these questions in mind, Chris Van den Broeck examined the roles of EAP teachers, EAP learners, and the institutions in which they are placed. Through a theoretical framework of critical pedagogy, inquiry, and literacy, the study examined whether EAP programmes might serve a dual purpose: to enhance language ability and proficiency in a way not usually approached in existing EAP curricula and texts, while potentially allowing for a deeper consideration of how EAP learners view themselves and their lived experiences within the academic discourse community. Through an exploration of these concepts came a more nuanced, meaningful understanding of the complex relationships between second language learners, their instructors, and the post-secondary institutions where they learn. Findings from research showed certain pedagogical and theoretical assumptions to teaching and learning in an EAP context, viewed through a critical lens to pedagogy, were validated; others were rejected or remained inconclusive. Potentials for further study, specifically in the domains of plurilingual pedagogies and pedagogical third spaces, were discussed.

Understanding the Settlement Experiences of Newcomer Adult EAL Students as they Seek Belonging Within their New Communities in Urban New Brunswick

Under the co-supervision of Dr. Paula Kristmanson and Dr. Casey Burkholder, Andrea Dias explores the settlement experiences of newcomer adult EAL students as they seek belonging within their new communities in one urban New Brunswick city. In adopting a critical multicultural education framework, which uses a critical and transformative meta-orientation, identity work, anti-racist education, and culturally responsive teaching, this study explored how social interaction and belonging are understood by nine participants in one urban New Brunswick city. Using a case study methodology, Andrea triangulated the findings using a focus group, a participatory map-making activity, and individual interviews. Three themes emerged from the research and were discussed as: attachment and community, comfort and security, and local knowledge and local language. Andrea's study suggested implications for teachers, policymakers, settlement language organizations, and the larger community, including newcomers themselves.

Andrea Dias received her MEd in Spring, 2022.

L₂RIC's Contributions to the Faculty of Education at UNB / Contributions de l'IRL₂C à la Faculté d'éducation de l'UNB

Undergraduate Program

L₂RIC contributes to the Bachelor of Education program at UNB in numerous ways. Firstly, L₂RIC offers two certificate programs: the Certificate in Teaching French as a Second Language / Le certificat en enseignement du français langue seconde (CEFSL) and the Certificate in Teaching English as a Second Language (CTESL). Both undergraduate certificates focus on equipping future second/additional language (L2) educators with the pedagogical strategies and skills needed to teach in a variety of L2 environments (e.g., French immersion, intensive French, post-intensive French, French as an additional language, and English as an additional language). Included in the certificates are courses focused on L2 teaching and learning as well as field experience components. Candidates for the certificates also require an advanced (minimum B2) level of language proficiency.

Secondly, related to the language proficiency component, L₂RIC also supports students who are wishing to maintain or improve their linguistic skills. The “Séances franco” sessions, offered two evenings a week online, support FSL teacher candidates in building their linguistic competence and confidence. The Séances franco facilitator focuses on relevant topics (e.g., education-related topics, subject area specific topics) in order to stimulate discussion and provide students with corrective feedback.

Thirdly, team members at L₂RIC also contribute by serving on faculty committees such as field services, BEd program committee, awards committee, and admissions committee. This work involves supporting the Associate Dean and the Field Services Director in vetting applications of those interested in second/additional language specializations, interviewing potential FSL teacher candidates, choosing recipients for scholarships, bursaries and prizes (see below), and providing advice and support related to the BEd programs and practicum placements.

Finally, through a generous grant provided by Canadian Heritage, L₂RIC undergraduate students who specialize in L2 teaching have access to scholarships and prizes. Each academic year, to aid in recruitment, L₂RIC scholarships are awarded. Additionally, L₂RIC contributes to the Viviane Edwards Scholarship for future FSL teachers from New Brunswick. Professor Emerita Edwards was the founding Director of L₂RIC. At fall convocation, two prizes are awarded to exemplary graduates who have made FSL teaching the focus of their Bachelor of Education program.

Graduate Program

L₂RIC offers a Graduate Certificate in Bilingual and Multilingual Education. This five-course certificate gives graduate students a solid background in a variety of theoretical and pedagogical concepts as well as current issues related to second language teaching and learning. A small award has also been established for deserving graduate students who specialize in bilingual and multilingual education.

Graduate Certificate in Bilingual and Multilingual Education

Program Outcomes
	Enhance capacities to effectively teach and assess in second/additional language learning contexts.
	Consider skills and strategies for effective communication with second/additional language learners.
	Develop theoretical and practical expertise related to the teaching of students learning second/additional languages.
	Gain knowledge related to bilingual and multilingual programming in diverse learning contexts.
	Develop background related to principles and practices to support students from diverse linguistic and cultural backgrounds.
	Enhance understanding of inclusive and culturally-responsive educational design and instruction.

Students can enrol in the certificate program to...

Meet ongoing professional development needs.

Gain further experience and expertise in an area of interest.

Facilitate the transition to a Master of Education program.

This 15-credit hour graduate certificate, consisting of courses (2 required and 3 electives) can be completed year. Candidates are provided a 5-year time frame for completion.

Courses

- Foundations of Bilingual and Multilingual Education (ED6103).
- Teaching and Learning in Multilingual Contexts (ED6110).
- Electives include courses related to diversity, inclusion, and second/additional language pedagogies.
- The 2 required courses for this certificate are both offered online. The 3 electives can be chosen from online or distance options.
- Credits from the certificate can be transferred to an M.Ed within a 5-year time frame.

Certificat de 2e cycle en éducation bilingue et multilingue

Résultats du programme
Améliorer les capacités à enseigner et à évaluer efficacement dans des contextes d'apprentissage d'une langue seconde/additionnelle.
Considérer les compétences et les stratégies pour une communication efficace avec les apprenants en langue seconde/additionnelle.
Développer une expertise théorique et pratique liée à l'enseignement des étudiants apprenant des langues seconde/additionnelles.
Acquérir des connaissances liées à la programmation bilingue et multilingue dans divers contextes d'apprentissage.
Développer des connaissances liées aux principes et aux pratiques pour soutenir les étudiants de divers horizons linguistiques et culturels.
Améliorer la compréhension de la conception et de l'enseignement de l'éducation inclusive et adaptée à la culture.

Les étudiants s'inscrivent au programme pour...

Poursuivre leur développement professionnel.

Acquérir une expérience et une expertise supplémentaires dans un domaine d'intérêt.

Faciliter la transition vers un programme de maîtrise en éducation.

Cours

- Fondements de l'éducation bilingue et multilingue (ED6103).
- Enseignement et apprentissage dans des contextes multilingues (ED6110).
- Les cours au choix comprennent des cours liés à la diversité, à l'inclusion et aux pédagogies des langues seconde/additionnelles.
- Les 2 cours obligatoires pour ce certificat sont tous 2 offerts en ligne. Les 3 cours au choix peuvent être choisi parmi les options en ligne ou à distance.
- Les crédits du certificat peuvent être transférés à un M.Ed dans un délai de 5 ans.

Ce certificat de 15 crédits, composé de 5 cours (2 obligatoires et 3 au choix) peuvent être suivis en an. Les candidats disposent d'un délai de 5 ans pour terminer le certificat.

Recognizing Excellence and Service/ Reconnaissance de l'excellence

Dr. Paula Kristmanson: University of New Brunswick Teaching Scholar Award

Considered one of the highest recognitions of teaching excellence at UNB, the award of University Teaching Scholar honours University of New Brunswick teachers who have demonstrated a consistently high level of teaching excellence and teaching-related activities. Dr. Paula Kristmanson was both humbled and honoured to have been nominated for this award. To have been chosen as one of the two recipients reflects the importance that Dr. Kristmanson places on teaching and learning.

L₂RIC Featured in UNB's Researcher Introductions Video Project

In September 2022, UNB's Vice-President (Research) and Office of Research Services issued a call to faculties and departments across campus to help in their efforts to promote awareness of the important and impactful research taking place at UNB—and the people responsible for it.

The Vice-President (Research) and Office of Research Services invited all researchers to create a short video that answered three key questions:

1. Who are you?
2. What are you working on/what is your research area?
3. Why is it important/what is the impact of your work?

L₂RIC accepted this invitation and worked with Marc Bragdon, Head of the Harriet Irving Library Research Commons at UNB Libraries, to produce a video using the technology available in the Lightboard Studio at the Research Commons. Dr. Paula Kristmanson, Dr. Karla Culligan, Dr. Josée Le Bouthillier, Dr. Melissa Dockrill Garrett, and Julianne Gerbrandt are all featured in the video.
