LUNCHEON PRESENTATION

The Chair welcomed Amanda Reid Rogers, Piluwitahasuwin, Assistant Vice-President Indigenous Engagement. Piluwitahasuwin is a Wolastoqey word meaning "one who promotes change in a good way toward truth." Amanda is a registered nurse and is Dakota-Sioux with family and community connections in Wolastokuk. She recently completed her Masters degree using a community-based collaborative participatory action research approach for her thesis focused on the experiences of Wolastoqey women who are descendants of survivors of the Indian residential school experience in Canada. Her role is to promote and expand Indigenous culture and opportunities on our campuses and within the community.

reconciliation process and adding this type of position continues to grow. She spoke to the increasing demographic of indigenous youth and noted the goal of proportional representation, which, for UNB, would mean approximately 5% of the student population. She spoke to the need for addressing barriers to post-secondary education for indigenous peoples and the need to build trust to overcome damage from colonization. She noted that her priorities would be supporting the Indigenous Student Council, focusing on quality of experience for indigenous students and formalizing a smudging policy. Other aspects of her work include building an anti-indigenous racism mechanism, facilitating the hiring of a new elder-in-residence and Director for the Mi'kmaq Wolastoqey Centre and setting up an Indigenous Advisory Group.

Members discussed the smudging policy and the sensitivities around smoke allergies and fire suppression systems on campus. A. Reid Rogers explained that she was working with Facilities Management, Security and Risk Management to create a notification protocol before a smudge takes place and process for ventilation of that room after. She highlighted the importance of smudging being excluded from the University's Smoking Policy. Members discussed how colonization might be included in program curricula for all students. Members discussed micro-aggressions and other subtle forms of racism that may make indigenous students feel uncomfortable or unsafe. A. Reid Rogers indicated that education is the best way to reduce or eliminate those behaviours and that she was working with the Human Rights and Positive Environment office to include the perspective of indigenous faculty, students and staff as part of the University's Equity, Diversity and Inclusion work. Members discussed honoraria paid to indigenous speakers, suggesting that there be some sort of policy to formalize those fees. Members discussed the community movement around the renaming of the St. John River to the Wolastuk and the creation of allies through education. The Chair thanked A. Reid Rogers for her presentation.

He expressed the hope that this work would continue and that the office for strategic partnerships would grow. He noted that UNB had been named a Top 100 Employer by the Globe & Mail.

E. Campbell noted that the India Initiative was underway and offered positive opportunities for the University. The President noted that it was possible as MITACS supported both four and six month exchanges.
